

YouTube Transcript Extraction Error Report

Author: Unknown

Source: Unknown

This report details a technical error encountered during an attempt to extract a YouTube transcript. The specific error message indicates that the 'YouTubeTranscriptApi' object, likely part of a programming library or framework, does not possess an attribute or method named 'get_transcript'. This suggests a potential issue with how the function or method is being called, a discrepancy between the expected method name and the actual one, or an incompatibility with the version of the 'YouTubeTranscriptApi' library being used. The error message is programmatic in nature, directly indicating a problem in the code attempting the transcript extraction rather than a problem with YouTube's service itself.
